Tradition in Every Dozen

In 1934, Lyle and Ina Gray embarked on a journey to transform the egg industry from their humble egg grading station in Ridgetown, Ontario. By 1969, their unwavering commitment had established L.H. Gray & Son as the sole grading station in the area. The following year, Ina’s vision culminated in the creation of “Gray Ridge Eggs Farms,” a name that seamlessly blended the family legacy with their Ridgetown roots.

Today, Gray Ridge Eggs, led by Bill Gray, stands as a monumental force in Ontario’s egg industry. The company ships an impressive 1 million dozen eggs each week—nearly 12 million eggs in total—making up almost half of the eggs consumed in Ontario.

Bill Gray’s guiding principle, “Keep growing, keep building and operate as if you will go on forever,” fuels his drive for innovation and excellence. This philosophy has earned him a nomination for Ontario’s Agricultural Hall of Fame. Bill’s dedication to integrating global best practices while honoring local values is evident in the welfare-friendly housing systems and advanced technologies implemented at Gray Ridge.

The company’s success extends beyond impressive statistics. Gray Ridge Eggs is a cornerstone of its community, supported by a local workforce that embodies the company’s values. Each carton of Gray Ridge eggs represents a fusion of tradition, innovation, and a commitment to quality, ensuring that the legacy of Lyle and Ina Gray endures through every egg.
